The LEX® Legal Suite is designed for in-house lawyers and their support staff, in corporate and government legal departments. It's a simple system that makes it easy for groups or individuals to store important information about their matters in one place.

Why LEX?

Many in-house lawyers and their support staff find it hard to manage their matters using self-designed databases and spreadsheets.

- Key information about matters is spread over many places.
- It's hard to keep a central register up-to-date.
- The information isn't easily accessible to everyone who needs it.
- It takes hours to produce even basic management reports.
- Managers have little idea where money is going or where time is being spent.
- There is a lot of "reinventing the wheel", and a loss of corporate memory when people leave.

We knew there had to be a better way, and set out to create it.

The better way

The aim was to create a product powerful and simple enough for managers, in-house lawyers and support staff to use on a daily basis. To achieve this, we set ambitious goals for the product.

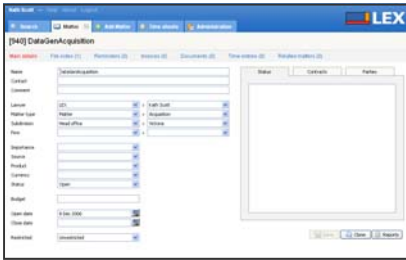

- Avoid the complexity and cost of unnecessary features.
- Provide a much better experience than those self-designed databases and spreadsheets.
- Slip into people's lives elegantly, rather than being risky or disruptive.
- Integrate easily with people's existing technology.
- Work straight out of the box, with no long set-up process.
- Require very little training, so it can be used easily even by temporary staff.

In-house lawyers and support staff tell us that LEX connects with their needs, is both powerful and easy to use, and is indeed a "better way".

Since 1997, we've been helping in-house lawyers, contract managers and intellectual property managers organise their valuable information and feel more in control. We specialise in migrating information from existing databases and spreadsheets into our simple-to-use products.

We're brothers, and we own and run the company. Justin had been a partner in a law firm, an in-house lawyer and a director of a pharmaceutical company. Richard had worked as a business and technology consultant in the financial services industry. We saw the need for better software products specifically to help corporations and government agencies manage their legal matters, contracts and intellectual property.

Our clients include many of Australia's best-known and largest companies, as well as many smaller and emerging organisations. These clients operate in fields such as health care, biotechnology, manufacturing, financial services, energy, venture capital, education, government, media, packaging and retail.
